This website uses cookies for performance optimisation. In this statement we would like to inform you about the cookies we use.

What are cookies?

A cookie is a small digital file that this website sends to your computer through your browser. The cookie will be saved on the harddisk of your computer. Cookies collect and save information which the cookie will send back to our website, when you visit the website again. This can be very usefull to rerember your account information, for example.

Google Analytics

We would like to know how our visitors and customers use our website, so we can improve the performance of the website. We therefore use Google Analytics.

Google Analytics uses cookies which will be placed on your computer via our website. Google analyses the information it gets from these cookies. The information will be as much anonymised as possible.

Google will only share the information with third parties when required by law or when third parties process the information for Google. We [did/did not] give permission to Google to use the information for other Google services.

Google is a company from the US. The information will be saved on servers based in the US. Google lives up to the Safe Harbor principles [<http://export.gov/safeharbor/>].

Find more information about Google Analytics and privacy on Google's website [http://www.google.com/intl/nl_nl/analytics/privacyoverview.html].

Social Media buttons

We use social media buttons to make it easier for you to share our content. All these social media services have their own privacy regulations. Most of these social media services use cookies which they will place on your computer when you use their buttons or other services. For more information about their privacy and cookie policy, please visit the website of the social media service you would like to use.
